RESEARCH DEVELOPMENT

The Office of Research and Development works with faculty and staff to creatively develop and secure research opportunities and increase competitiveness in research. The office facilitates and implements policies and guidelines on research activity processes such as calls for research proposals, classification of research, institutional research funding eligibility, research centers and statistical services, incentives to faculty/staff researchers, penalty clauses, guidelines for access to research funding support, research proposal development, processing and approval, commissioned or contract research by external funding institution, research paper presentation, research project continuity and sustainability, publication and presentation incentives, the conduct of in-house review of research programs/projects, and procedures for holding research congress.

EXTENSION

The University of Rizal System performs extension as one of its primordial functions with the interface of instruction, research and production through the provision of enabling mechanisms which include among others policy and budget support, establishment of partnerships with government and non-government organizations, stakeholders, and industries. The projects are conducted through various modalities and ensure responsiveness to the developmental needs of the target beneficiaries. The sustainability of the extension services leads to the realization of the intent to empower communities.

PRODUCTION

ONE CAMPUS ONE PRODUCT ADVOCACY PROJECT

One Campus One Product (OCOP) advocacy project develops, market and generates income from the sales of signature product/s based on presented and approved research project proposals.

Through the collaborative efforts of the Campus Director and Campus Head/ Coordinator for Production, the Campus establishes entrepreneurial activities through the OCOP advocacy to advance and support the campus operation, programs, projects, and activities.
